

Big data shouldn't mean big problems

Proactively planning and executing a data strategy can dramatically lower costs, mitigate discovery disputes, and allow your legal team to focus on substantive issues and strategy.

As a litigator-led company, we have seen firsthand the pitfalls of not beginning with the end in mind. From data creation through defensible disposition, we can help you navigate the choppy waters of litigation, investigations, and regulatory actions.

We consult with clients on many types of legal projects to address defensibility, budget, and deadline management. Our goal is to build and sustain genuine business relationships with clients, and a forward-looking approach for each matter.

Here are some ways we can support your team:

Information Governance: Understand the sources and risks of the data created and stored at your organization to create and enforce proper data retention and disposition policies.

Discovery motion drafting: Minimize "discovery about discovery" by identifying, prioritizing, and developing requests based on technical features and case law.

Custodian surveys and interviews: Early strategy can drastically reduce eDiscovery costs by optimizing custodian numbers and data volume.

Meet and confer process: Facilitate Rule 26(f) compliance to ensure efficient, cost-effective discovery and avoid expensive motions disputes.

eDiscovery counsel: Engage as eDiscovery counsel for complex matters through our partnership with Mattingly Burke Cohen & Biederman, LLP.
